Still Passing Through Fertile Valleys and Prosperous Cities.

Today morning May 19th at 8:30 a. m. the best known people of Fresno turned over the party was drawn out to see the large vineyards, some of them covering several hundred acres, and were also shown through the large buildings where the wine is made and shipped in such immense quantities. The city is situated in the San Joaquin valley, the home of the famous wine raisers, whose famous wine-works have a world wide reputation. Wheat harvesting has already commenced here. After returning to the city the editors were welcomed at the Opera House, where an elegant band was spread by the most elegant ladies having made preparation in the carriage for the annex. The entire party was comfortably seated and amply fed. Fresno is a thriving city of about 12,000, and boasts a fine art museum. The Opera house is the emblem of the handsomeness. A florid ladler leading up to the "gross" hammocks of roses, and a chair made of luscious roses. Supper was spread for the entire party in the Annex after which speaking was done. In the evening a social gathering was held at the Hotel Del Monte, a hotel with a worldwide reputation. With all the resorts out here I have not crossed any which surpassed the Hyatt Hotel.

Mayday stops were made at San Jose, and Palo Alto, the home of Stanford and we pulled into San Francisco at 5 p. m.

NOTES.

At Sacramento Mr. J. C. Coleman, a former resident of Hopkinsville, welcomed us royally. He is postmaster of that city and very popular.

Mr. Chas. W. Fisher, who used to clerk in Hopper's drug store about 16 years ago, is at San Jose doing well.

for the comfort and pleasure of the party.

Mr. W. L. Knight is the passenger agent in charge, and while he has his hands full is equal to the emergency.

BLAINE RESIGNS.

The Secretary of State Gathers Up His Doll Rags and Goes Home.

INTO THE RACE FOR PRESIDENT AND A RED HOT FIGHT IS ON.

The Minneapolis Convention Meets
To-Day.

Saturday afternoon Secretary Blaine gathered his position in the Cabinet of President Harrison and the resignation was accepted in an hour.

The following correspondence explains:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, June 4, 1892, 12:45 p. m.—To The President: I respectfully beg leave to submit my resignation of the office of Secretary of State of the United States, to which I was appointed by you on March 5, 1889.

It is my desire to make public business to the Department of State justifies me in requesting that my resignation may be accepted immediately. I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, June 4, 1892.—To The Secretary of State: Your letter of this date, in which you demand my resignation as Secretary of State of the United States, has been received. The terms in which you state your desire are so close to me as to leave me no choice but to accede to your wishes at once. Your resignation is, therefore, accepted. Very respectfully yours,

To Hon. James G. Blaine, Washington, D. C.

The cause of the naming of it was that Blaine had decided to oppose the President for the Republican nomination at Minneapolis to-day, and his friends, with his son Edmund Blaine on hand, to oppose him in the convention city.

The Harrison campaign, however, did not start until the Washington news was first received that they were entirely knocked out and could not talk.

Mr. John C. Newell, Harrison's manager, was the most rattled man seen in many a long day. He was bitter in his language and his manner was so fierce and characterized as the basest and most infamous act of perfidy. What Mr. Newell said was repeated and re-echoed throughout all the public places by the Harrison men, and to express it mildly, they were as bad as the scoundrels of the Harrison campaign.

The Harrison campaign, however, did
not start until the Washington news
was first received that they were entirely knocked out and could not talk.

Address, F. J. C. CHESNUT & CO., T. D. TOLSON by Druggists, 76c.

The June number of "Romance" contains sixteen original and selected stories of remarkable high and even merit—stories of adventure, of France, India, Russia, and the United States. The balance between gray and gay, the wild and the romantic, is admirably maintained.
One sees a tear over Alphonsine Dau-douf's "Last Class," or Lydia Pas-chot's touching "Marphie"; laughs over the "Running Down a Slave Ship," and others like them, in order to reach the solution of their elements. The whole is a picture of the imagination, for the first time in English in this country, of "The Song of the Swan" in Grieg's Oberon. This distinguished Frenchman, whose popularity in his own nation is phenomenal, is too little known in America. This magazine is issued by Standard Publishing Company, Clinton Hall, Astor Place, New York. The price is 25 cents a copy; subscriptions, $2.50 a year.

From a strictly party standpoint, Mr. Blaine has made a bad break, both for himself and the Republican party. The indications are now strong that he has not only beaten him in the race for the nomination, but will be the beaten at the polls in November. He makes it clear for anyone instrumental in bringing about the whipping. The situation is that if the President cannot win him he will be unable to hand the nomination over to one of his friends. He is necessarily compelled by the situation to make a stand.

He can not afford to as much as whisper a suggestion for a compromise candidate. With him it is Harrison or his enemies, and the President must stand by himself.

It will be no victory for Harrison if any other man is elected.

It is for Blaine or somebody to beat Harrison. The tactics of the Blaine men will be either to attempt a stomp of the convention to Blaine or to stay off a vote as long as possible, or until they are ready. The sub-Commission on Credentials being composed mainly of Harrison men will greatly aid in delaying the convention until it is ripe for action.

The Harrison men now admit that most of the contest the Blaine men will give the seats.

Great interest in the probable nomination of New York for the Senate delegations. From the information just obtained, Platt will control 45 of the 72 votes from New York for Blaine and that Quay will get the lion's share of Pennsylvania.
The Illinois delegation is said to be split between Harrison and Blaine.
With all this the President is still in good position, and if his managers do not lose their heads will secure the prize. He goes into the convention with nearly one-half of the delegations at least, and the Harrison men, and if these instructions are obeyed, he will go through on the first ballot.

Mr. Watterson in Sunday's Convention makes these editorial comments on the resignation:

"Read by the light of his conduct in 1888, it was divisive. That at the supreme moment, he should make a manner as to arouse the bitterest feeling among their party associates —obviously aimed to carry by storm, and in his own interest, a convention which Mr. Harrison would have surrendered to him in the beginning—can be called by discriminating and dispassionate observers by only one of two names: it is either madness or treachery. It may well be that he was actuated by a sense of wantonness, for the sake of wantonness, for the sake of wantonness, for the sake of wantonness.

Even Mr. Cleveland can beat Mr.
Blaine, whose nomination is the one event that will give to the Democratic party such a victory.

The states so fought against Sisson have fought and do fight against this brilliant but luckless soldier of fortune, who, now less than ever, is master of the resources needed to the impending combat of politics. Mr.
Blaine's fall is the fall of a man who will pay the forfeit of his ambition, and his career will go down in disaster and wreck. We repeat that he is responsible for a situation which has within it some of the elements of a tragedy. The entire truth must be told, and the world will be shocked by the news of his fall.
